Want and its sorrows are by them unfelt, Save when for others woes they pitying melt, And to the aching heart, oppress d with grief, Like angels, they administer relief. No kindred hearts from them are turned away; For gold, that glittering bauble, gilds their clay, And with its yellow dross it smooths the road, And makes enduring their dark abode. Not thus the sons of labour are repaid For buried hopes, when from their eyelids fade The glorious beams of God s eternal light; But all becomes one dark, chaotic night, Whence dismal dreams of cares and want and woe Prove sad realities such as few know, Save those who feel them. From Blindness, a poem by Edmund White, to be had of the author, 8, St. James s-place, Prince s-road, Notting-hill, London. Price 2s. 6d. E White, five years since, at the age of forty, became blind, after ten years constant duty as one of the guards on the Great Western Railway. He is the second guard I have become acquainted with on that line who has lost his sight. On White s dismissal and application for assistance...
