He has noticed on frequent occasions several series of broad bands or waves pass from one end of the continuous spectrum to the other, which apparently confirms the changing colour of the stars, according to the interference theory of M. Arago. On the other hand, M. Respighi, an Italian astronomer, who has also observed the wavy motion from one end of the stellar spectrum to the other, differs in many respects from the conclusions of M. Wolf, and throws some doubt on the accuracy of the theory of Arago. M. Respighi considers that the cause of scintillation arises from real and momentary deviations in the positions of different coloured rays produced by the changing state of the atmosphere, and that when these rays are abstracted from the images of the stars, they would naturally exhibit continual variations in their colour and intensity. He has also noticed that the motion of the undulations is from the red end of the spectrum towards the violet end for the stars in the west, and on the contrary, from violet to red for the stars in the east, while on the meridian the motion is more or less irregular. The undulations are seen with much more distinctness in stars near the horizon than in those at a great elevation. M. Respighi, from a due consideration of the phenomena observed by him, concludes that the regularity of the motion of the undulations in the spectrum, taking into account...
