Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from The Early History of Instrumental Precision in Medicine: An Address; Before the Second Congress of American Physicians and Surgeons; September 23rd, 1891 A broad-minded student of the eye once said to me: We should all be the better for an hour or two a day in a general hospital ward, and added, loyally, the very great relative perfection of the therapeutics of visual disorders is an intellectual risk. And if Cornelius Agnew could say that, we may well fancy - and you will pardon the jest which holds a truth - that a too exclusive study of the eye may result in mental egotism. If men as old as I are ready to acknowledge this danger, believe me that for the young the pursuit of but one line of practice is only too apt to result in an overestimate of their complete fitness, in hasty papers, mere case reports, wild pursuit of novelties, and the production of numberless minor text-books which can have but a selfish use. Said Romberg once to a friend of mine, who gave him a new American book, Is the author thirty-five? I will look at it; is he forty? I will read it. We have all come to admit gratefully the value of specialisation in medicine; but he who is watchful over the general interests of his profession must have seen that this subdivision of labour involves for us perils, which are seen on the one side by the general practitioner, and on the other by those who, in a large-minded way, pursue limited lines of work. Medicine does not grow in an even fashion. When watching a saline solution...
